Not illustrated. 1884 Excerpt: .her die; you cannot forget the torture you endured when you stood on the brink of her grave, and your conscience told you that you had been the cause of her death. It seemed to me at that time that, however long you might survive on earth, you could never know such deep and bitter suffering as that which you then experienced. I hoped, I trusted, that you had at last become a changed man. But no; I had only seen the bar of iron in a furnace of seven-fold fierceness. I have since beheld it only more inveterately hardened. Bear with me, my friend, said his minister, when I say that we see in yourself an evidence of all that affliction, even the most terrible, can accomplish, and of what it cannot accomplish. Bichard, we have but one way before us. Things are come to their last extremity with you. You have come forth from your trials only more awfully hardened; your last state is worse than your first. That one way is still open to you: you are still mercifully spared to avail yourself of it, if you will. Christ is still set before you, as, The Way, the Truth, and the Life. His own words are, He that believeth in Me, though he were dead, yet shall he live; and whosoever liveth and believeth in Me shall never die (John xi. 25, 26). Come let us fall down and humble ourselves before the...
