PEARSON During the 13th Century, a vigorous argument among Middle Eastern rabbis concerned how one ought to make a fair assessment of an olive crop value for tithing purposes. Should one consolidate the crop, systematically mix the olives, and then conscientiously draw a small random sample? Or, might one simply grab a handful of olives from the nearest basket and make an estimate of the crop's worth. The issue, of course, is one that research designers and research users confront often -- balancing the need for information against the resources that must be put into actually collecting the data -- in deciding how much effort is warranted to produce fair evidence. For the rabbis, who argued for twenty-five years over the matter, the issue can be resolved with a special rule. In this as in other cases, if the demand for information is biblical in origin -- if God is its source, then one ought to be considerably conscientious; a more scientific and more expensive endeavor is warranted....
